Correspondence with authors will always be carried out by e-mail. Each paper will be sent to an Editor who will be responsible for its assessment. Manuscripts will be reviewed anonymously by two expert and independent referees (one will be responsible for the methodological part). In any case, authors should propose two reviewers to which their manuscripts can be sent. The Editors and the Editorial Board will assess such comments and reserve the right to reject any contribution not considered to meet the standards of the Journal or will make the appropriate suggestions for amendments. The corresponding author(s) will receive the final decision (Revise, Accept, Reject) from the Editor by e-mail, or on-line, containing the editorial comments. In case of revision, the manuscript must be returned to the editor by e-mail and the authors should include point-by-point replies to the editorial comments. In the case of discrepancies, pending a formal request by the authors the manuscript may be evaluated by a third reviewer.

The Editorial Board will review and assess the contributions. The planning of the contents of each issue will be the job of the Editors and Editorial Assistants. The design and planning of the article will be the responsibility of the Technical Assessor.

Proofs (Spanish- English) will be sent to authors by e-mail and should be returned within 72 hours of receipt. Corrections should be restricted to typesetting errors. Extensive changes at the proofs stage that affect the original sense of the article are not permitted.
